Case - Timothy N. Pfeiffer,
Subject - Homicide, New Brunswick, N.J.,
Operative - 312.

312/undercover

szky was in the newspaper business in New York. While in conversation, Operative learned that this man's name was Nathan Rosenfeld and that he was Justice of the Peace in New Brunswick, and that he also was engaged in the insurance business. Mr. Rosenfeld remarked to Operative, "It's a wonder I was not mixed up in the case as I knew Pearl Bahmer." Mr. Rosenfeld advised Operative that he was the one who issued the Warrant for the arrest of Pearl Bahmer's father on her complaint. Mr. Rosenfeld informed Operative that Pearl Bahmer's father beat her because of a letter which he had opened addressed to her, the contents of which had angered him. Mr. Rosenfeld advised Operative that some of the Officials had no use for him, but that he did not care as he could beat them to it. Rosenfeld told Operative that they were making a bluff in cleaning up Nelson St., and other places in order to show that they were on the job.

Mr. Rosenfeld upon meeting his friend coming from the train from Philadelphia, bid Operative good night and departed leaving with Operative his card.

At about 10.30 p.m. Operative left the railroad station, proceeded to his room and discontinued.
